

School Safety and Security

in the District of Columbia

SY 2011-2012

Prepared by Metropolitan Police Department

Chief of Police

August 2011

Pursuant to D.C. Official Code § 5-132.02(d)(1), the Metropolitan Police Department (MPD) is required to publish a plan to be implemented before the beginning of each school year for protecting children walking to and from District of Columbia Public Schools (DCPS) and public charter schools and for protecting children from gang and crew violence on, in, and around DCPS and public charter school property. This report is provided in compliance with this Act.

OVERVIEW OF MPD SCHOOL SECURITY & SAFETY PROGRAM

Two MPD units have primary responsibility for working together to support safe schools: the School Security Division and the Police Districts. The School Security Division (SSD), under the leadership of the Assistant Chief of the Patrol Services and School Security Bureau, coordinates MPD resources related to school security. These resources include the deployment of School Resource Officers and contract security guards at DCPS, and coordination of other divisions in the Department – such as the Patrol Districts and the Gang Intelligence Unit – with government agencies and community interests in the city. The School Resource Officers (SROs) are MPD police officers with specialized training designed to enhance community policing with youth and schools. The SROs are first and foremost police officers who have a legal obligation to address crime and to conduct arrests when a criminal offense occurs in their presence. The SROs are required to meet all standard police training requirements, to support prosecution of any arrests, and to possibly respond to emergencies in close proximity to their assigned schools. In addition to fulfilling their primary responsibilities as police officers to respond to any criminal incident, SROs:

- Coordinate mediations and response to conflicts that have happened or may happen off school grounds;
- Provide mentoring and outreach program , such as seminars on identifying and deterring bullying;
- Coordinate the Safe Passage Program to provide safe routes for youth to and from schools;
- Provide more intensive support to at-risk youth, such as home visits to chronic truants; and
- Visit and work with the schools that feed into middle and high schools.

The Department’s role in school security expanded significantly in 2004 when the Council of the District of Columbia enacted the School Safety and Security Procedures Act of 2004, delegating the sole contracting authority for security services at DCPS facilities from DCPS to MPD. Now, MPD manages almost 300 contractual security guards deployed to more than 120 DCPS facilities. With contractual security guards, deployment can be rapidly changed to address emerging issues. Additional guard hours are provided at certain sites for before and after care programs, sports, and other activities at school facilities which may or may not involve students (i.e., community groups meeting in school facilities). With the total school security contract valued at almost $14 million, the School Security Division manages MPD’s largest contract.

The Department’s seven police districts have primacy in ensuring the safety of students outside the schools and provide support in combating truancy and ensuring the safe travel of students to and from school. The Special Liaison Branch (SLB) also plays an important role in supporting students. Through the four units of the SLB – Asian Liaison Unit, Deaf & Hard of Hearing Liaison Unit, Gay and Lesbian Liaison Unit, and Latino Liaison Unit – the Department reaches out to historically underserved communities, including students.

Efficient and effective communication among these elements and the schools is supported by a rapid email notification system. School administrators use an email address specific to each police district (e.g., 1DSchools.concerns@dc.gov) to send requests, concerns, or information simultaneously to the command staff of the Patrol Services and School Security Bureau, the School Security Division, and the local district commander. This communication tool is available to all schools, even if SROs are not deployed to the school.

Deployment of School Resource Officers

School Resource Officers are deployed either as “Designated/Shared SROs” or “Roving SROs.” This deployment model is designed to be flexible to enable the Department to match existing resources with emerging needs. For instance, this year, MPD will assign a greater proportion of its SROs to a later shift to provide enhanced support to schools that have late academic programming and special events.

- Designated / Shared SROs: Schools and student populations with the greatest need for MPD support have one or more SROs designated to the schools. Of these, many schools are clustered together in close proximity, with multiple schools sharing facilities or being located within a block or two of each other. SROs serving these schools may be shared, with the officers traveling between sites throughout the day.
- Roving SROs: For the majority of schools in the District, establishing a strong personal relationship with an SRO will meet their needs. Roving SROs are teamed in pairs to serve middle and high schools that do not have designated SROs. These teams visit each school on their beat daily to check in with the principal or his/her designee, and address any concerns. Roving SROs are a resource for coordinating Safe Passages, targeted student outreach, and programs. As with other SROs, these officers coordinate conflict mediations if needed, and lend support and provide resource information to at-risk students.

GANG & CREW VIOLENCE IN SCHOOLS

The presence of criminal and often violent gangs in the District is a significant concern to MPD and the community. Criminal street gangs contribute to tragic violence and other destabilizing crime, disorder, and intimidation in the city. Although some gangs use the word “crew” in their name, MPD identifies a gang as any group that meets the definition of a criminal street gang under District law:

“(1) “Criminal street gang” means an association or group of 6 or more persons that:

(A) Has as a condition of membership or continued membership, the committing of or actively participating in committing a crime of violence, as defined by D.C. Official Code § 23-1331(4); or

(B) Has as one of its purposes or frequent activities, the violation of the criminal laws of the District, or the United States, except for acts of civil disobedience.” D.C. Official Code § 22-951(e).

Groups that do not meet the definition of a criminal street gang are often generically referred to as neighborhood crews. Some of these groups may actually use the name of a gang, but may not be engaged in any criminal activity. Moreover, whereas adult crews are more likely to be neighborhood based, the open enrollment in schools contributes to a more fluid membership. Although a school group may self-identify with a neighborhood, often only a few of the members are actually from that neighborhood. For the sake of simplicity, since the police identification of a group may differ markedly from the self-identified label, we will refer to them all as “gangs” in this report. Regardless of what they are called, gang members are enrolled in all high schools and most middle schools in the city. That said, although adult gang participation in the city may be reflected in the schools, it is important to note that it also differs substantially. The majority of the violence associated with gangs is committed by adults, most gangs are not committing violence in the schools, and the overwhelming majority of youth are not involved in violent crime.

The Department’s gang strategy starts in elementary school with anti-bullying and anti-gang messaging. Bullying behavior is a serious issue that, absent appropriate intervention, may be an early indicator of a pattern of intimidation in later years. MPD presents anti-bullying seminars at elementary schools and coordinates interventions with parents upon the request of the school. MPD also works in partnership with other government and community groups to communicate strong and consistent anti-gang messaging and offer opportunities for positive activities to students of all ages.

Needless to say, anti-gang efforts continue with older students. The School Resource Officers provide strong support to youth in addressing problems both in and out of the school. The SROs work with students daily, developing a strong rapport and learning about their communities and concerns. Consistent, positive relationships with adults are a benefit to youth in their own right, but these relationships also lead youth to share important information with SROs about developing “beefs” or feuds arising among gangs. Relevant information is then shared with the Gang Intelligence Unit (GIU), which works closely with other government agencies and community groups to identify youth in need so that they can work to provide services and mediate conflict. The Department also monitors open source social media sites to gain more information about on-going or emerging conflicts. The GIU incorporates all data into the information it gathers from many other sources and uses it to help disrupt gang activity in the city. Additionally, SROs may hear information each morning about incidents that occurred outside of school the night or weekend before. In these instances, the SROs are able to quickly identify the persons involved in the incident and then marshal resources and assistance to diffuse the incident and support a peaceful learning environment. The Department works closely with the DCPS Gang Intervention Unit in these efforts to deter violence and to provide preventative support to youth.

The Department works continuously to identify emerging trends that could lead to issues within the schools. It hosts a daily afternoon conference call with partner agencies and contract security to discuss issues occurring in the schools, and a weekly Monday morning conference call to discuss weekend events that could lead to disputes in the schools. When it seems that a situation may be developing or a critical incident has occurred outside of the school that may impact students, SROs will meet with the administration and help to develop a safety strategy or provide mediation with the involved parties. In addition, MPD works with DCPS and the charter schools to identify scheduled events held at the schools that may require additional security or alternative planning due to the possibility of an incident occurring.

Unfortunately, interventions are not always successful. When violence breaks out, MPD’s intelligence-led policing strategy is helping to prevent retaliatory violence, some of which is associated with gang violence. Intelligence analysts immediately examine key factors in shootings (e.g., location, people, and weapons) to identify relevant trends. Information about potential groups – including gangs – or locations that might be involved in retaliatory violence is quickly disseminated. MPD and partner agencies can rapidly respond with a variety of tactics, such as enhancing visible police presence, mediating conflicts, and increasing visits to high risk individuals under court supervision.

Lastly, it is important to recognize that youth can also be victimized by violence as a result of bullying or other destructive relationships. For instance, domestic violence is not limited to just the individuals in relationships; it can also involve real or potential rivals, friends, or family members of youth in relationships. Thus the support and programs offered by MPD do not just focus on gang conflict and violent crime. Mediation services are available for any interpersonal conflict. The SROs also receive training on issues related to youth dating violence (as well as working with youth who may witness domestic violence in the home). In addition, DCPS, the Mayor’s Office of Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgender Affairs, MPD, and others have collaborated to develop an improved centralized response to bullying and harassment in schools. This system includes posters and flyers that provide students with specific information on how to report bullying and harassment, including confidential reporting.

TRAVEL TO & FROM SCHOOLS

While addressing disorder and violence in schools is critical, it is only part of the concern. Thus MPD's overall school safety strategy also addresses crime that youth may encounter while traveling to and from school. In addition to gang-related issues that may flare up when students leave the safety of school, students may also fall victim to the same types of crimes against persons that any individual may face, such as robbery or assault. As such, MPD works both to reduce crimes of opportunity and to deter potential targeted violence.

Through the Safe Passage program, MPD works with other agencies and resources to identify and support safe routes to and from major transportation points (e.g., Metro train and bus stops) after school dismissal. Both the SROs and the police district personnel coordinate with Metro Transit Authority Police, as well as other resources, to optimize safety and security in these areas. MPD patrol officers on foot, Segways or bike beats are deployed to these routes to support Safe Passages. Depending on the specifics of the school, other resources may include school crossing guards, the Department of Parks and Recreation's Roving Leaders, and private businesses along the route. These stakeholders ensure students are able to travel in certain areas safely and without incident. Deployment and action plans to address hot issues are checked through daily conference calls with MPD, DCPS, Metro Transit, Roving Leaders, and contract security. Information is shared about incidents that may affect student safety at dismissal time, and additional resources are deployed if necessary.

To enhance the existing Safe Passage program, the Council of the District of Columbia passed the School Safe Passage Emergency Zone Amendment Act of 2010. The new law allows the Chief of Police to temporarily declare areas around public schools a School Safe Passage Emergency Zone (SSPEZ). While not a panacea for crime and disorder, an SSPEZ could be a useful law enforcement tool in specific circumstances. Under the legislation, the Chief of Police could establish a zone if there is credible information to support that students and employees of, or visitors to, public schools and charter schools have been or will be targeted for assault-related offenses, crimes of violence, or dangerous crimes around the school or while traveling between the school and proximate public transportation.

The SSPEZs are modeled after the Drug Free Zones (DFZs) (D.C. Official Code § 48-1001 et seq.) and Prostitution Free Zones (PFZs) (D.C. Official Code § 22-2731) already sanctioned in District of Columbia statute. The law allows for the Chief of Police to establish for a limited period of time a defined geographic zone in which congregating for a specific purpose is prohibited. Specifically, under the new law:

- The Chief of Police may establish an SSPEZ for a maximum of five consecutive school days, from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m., if there is a finding that the health or safety of students and employees of or visitors to public school facilities is endangered by assault-related offenses, crimes of violence, or dangerous crimes either around the school or in the area between such schools and proximate public transportation.
- Within the boundaries of the zone, it would be prohibited for three or more persons to congregate for the purposes of assault-related offenses, crimes of violence, or dangerous crimes, and to fail to disperse after being so instructed by an MPD officer who reasonably believes the persons are congregating for the purpose of engaging in assault-related offenses, crimes of violence, or dangerous crimes.
- Similar to the DFZs and PFZs, the new criminal offense within an SSPEZ is for failing to disperse after being instructed to do so by an MPD officer. Violation of an SSPEZ is a misdemeanor punishable upon conviction by a fine of not more than $300 or imprisonment for not more than six months.

It is important to note that this law is not a general anti-loitering statute. Loitering is only prohibited to the extent that it is related to specific criminal activity, in this case loitering for purposes of assault-related offenses, crimes of violence, or dangerous crimes. Once declared, the zone must be appropriately marked, and no one can be arrested for a violation of the zone unless they are first ordered to disperse. It is also important to understand that the SSPEZ would not be an appropriate tool in all circumstances. For instance, if there are threats to specific students, employees, or school guests, establishing a zone may not be the best use of police resources to provide enhanced safety. Nor is the law crafted to support general crime deterrence. Instead, it is narrowly tailored to support law enforcement efforts in certain circumstances.

In addition, the District Department of Transportation's School Crossing Guard program also plays a major role in ensuring students are safe as they travel to and from school. Crossing guards are posted at intersections near DCPS and charter schools to:

- Encourage youth to behave in a safe manner near traffic;
- Provide assistance when the natural traffic flow does not allow enough time for youth to safely cross a street;
- Alert motorists to the presence of pedestrian traffic; and
- Observe and report any incidents or conditions that present a potential hazard to youth.

This year, DDOT will deploy more than 200 crossing guards. DDOT's School Crossing Guard Manual provides more information on qualifications, standard operating procedures, training, and deployment locations.

TRUANCY

Truancy prevents youth from realizing their full potential through education and opens the door for high risk behavior. Each police district has two truancy officers assigned to enforce truancy violations during the school day. They visit areas where youth are known to hang out or follow tips from the public about "skip parties" or other incidents, and take these youth back to their assigned school. During the 2010-2011 school year, MPD picked up youth for truancy violations more than 7,000 times. Truancy officers and SROs conduct outreach to students and parents and home visits to chronic truants.

MPD is also working with the Criminal Justice Coordinating Council and partner agencies on broader strategies to improve student attendance. This summer, the Truancy Task Force has launched an initial project focused on providing intensive support services and case management at schools with some of the highest truancy rates in the District. In addition, a broader public information campaign will address parents, students, community members, and businesses. The initiative will continue to provide support services to targeted youth and families during SY 2011-2012 based on information gathered and lessons learned during the initial summer effort.

EMERGENCY INCIDENTS AT SCHOOLS

Although the probability of a major emergency incident at a school may be lower than more routine crime and disorder, the risk to life and community is significant. Therefore preparing for these high risk scenarios is a top priority for MPD. With support from the Washington Regional Threat and Analysis Center, MPD continuously monitors for threats involving schools and stands ready to coordinate the deployment of personnel and resources in and around schools. The police districts have Incident Management Teams (IMT) trained to respond to and manage critical incidents, and more than 1,000 officers trained to respond to active shooter situations. The School Security Division and IMTs are supported by the DC Emergency and Safety Alliance, which provides centralized and quick access to District school emergency response plans and facility information. To test the extensive preparation efforts and ensure continued improvement, MPD coordinates with partner emergency response agencies, including the District's Homeland Security and Emergency Management Agency (HSEMA), and the Departments of Fire and Emergency Medical Services (FEMS) and Transportation (DDOT), to conduct drills and exercises involving schools.

YOUTH ENGAGEMENT

School Resource Officers lead or participate in many initiatives to support positive relationships with students and a safe school environment, and to encourage youth to be committed to their educational goals. Notable initiatives include the College Tour program, the Youth Advisory Council, and school assemblies.

College Tours

With the financial support of the Police Foundation, SSD was able to provide two college tours during the 2010-2011 school year, with additional tours planned for the coming school year. A total of 60 DCPS and charter school students participated in two college tours traveling to a total of seven different colleges. One group visited Coppin State University, Morgan State University, and Maryland Eastern Shore University, and another group toured Norfolk State University, Hampton University, North Carolina Central University, and St. Augustine University.

After the tours, students were provided with an opportunity to compete for laptop computers and a book bag. Students competed by writing an essay explaining how attending college and earning a degree contributes to society, family, and self, and how they were motivating themselves to pursue college. Twenty laptops and book bags were provided to the writers of the winning essays.

Youth Advisory Council

During the school year, members of the School Safety Division provide mentoring and partner with students from around the city in a Youth Advisory Council. Participants have an opportunity to learn about possible career paths and build strong relationships with adult mentors while giving back to the city through community service. Students meet monthly with SROs to engage in panel discussions, exchange ideas, and hear from motivational speakers. In addition, the students participate in community service projects. The YAC has supported Toys for Tots, "Stuff a Truck," the DC Food Bank, and "Shop with a Cop," as well as senior citizen nursing homes.

School Assemblies

School Resource Officers provide assistance to students, teachers, and principals by providing information and resources on critical topics during school assemblies. Assembly topics have included information on curfew, truancy, and other laws with an impact on students, avoiding gangs, bullying, teen dating and violence, domestic violence, avoiding destructive relationships, and suicide prevention. These sessions are led by SROs who have received specialized training on topics ranging from suicide prevention, youth development, and domestic violence.

SY 2011/2012 DEPLOYMENT

Table 1: School Resource Officers at DCPS and Public Charter Schools

The deployment plan below is by no means final. As with all patrol deployment, it is intended to be flexible to allow the Department to match resources with emerging needs. Moreover, it only reflects those charter schools that have chosen to participate in the program as of the date of the report. Many charter schools that do not have security concerns have decided not to participate at this time.

Table 2: Contract Security Guard Deployment at DCPS

It is important to note that MPD is not responsible for security matters related to Public Charter Schools. School Resource Officers neither serve as security guards nor as a substitute for a charter school's own security plan. The Department does not manage contract security for charter schools. Charters have the flexibility to fund their own individual programs and services, including investments in security, as they see fit with their Uniform Per Student Funding Formula dollars. For instance, facility and environmental design is an essential component of crime prevention and security. Measures such as security doors, cameras, and alarms can greatly enhance security and reduce risk in a facility.
