GOVERNMENT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
METROPOLITAN POLICE DEPARTMENT
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF POLICE
WASHINGTON, D. C., 20001

Honorable Marion Barry, Jr.
Mayor
District of Columbia

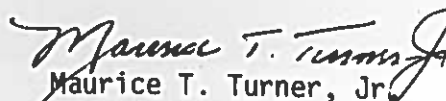

Dear Mayor Barry:

It is with pride that we submit this report on the department's achievements during Fiscal Year 1985. We are extremely pleased to have achieved our third consecutive year of steadily declining crime in the District of Columbia. More significantly, however, the FY 1985 crime total represents an eighteen-year low for reported crime in this city. We are firmly convinced that the most significant factor leading to this achievement has been the contribution and cooperation of city residents over the past several years. This has unquestionably been an important development in our war on crime. We are again reinforced in our view that crime reduction occurs neither by chance, nor solely through the efforts of the police, but is the result of TOTAL COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT.

In large measure the degree of community involvement in our war on crime, and the excellent state of police-community relations that currently prevails in the District of Columbia, is directly attributable to your personal commitment and untiring efforts toward making our streets and neighborhoods free of crime and fear. Through your travels across the city to meet with residents and promote your community crime prevention initiatives, you have succeeded in not only enlisting citizen participation, but in fostering a relationship between residents and this department that can truly be described as a "partnership" in working together to make our city a safer place to live and work.

Finally, I find it difficult to adequately express my appreciation to the men and women of this department who, through a sustained effort over the past several years, and much personal sacrifice - including the giving of their lives - have brought this city its lowest crime rate since 1967. I am confident that they have firmly ingratiated themselves with the residents of this community through their dedicated service and commitment to excellence.

While pleased with our achievements during the past year, we can not, and will not, rest upon our success. We will continue to challenge the personnel of this department, and each and every citizen of this community, to continue in their quest of establishing the District of Columbia as the safest city in the world.

Maurice T. Turner, Jr.
Chief of Police

The Continuing War on Drugs

One of the major targets in the battle against crime in the District has been the concerted effort to combat illegal drug activity. Drug-related arrests increased by 10% to 9,269, and the department seized over five million dollars of illegal drugs and recovered $1,082,180 in cash. This was accomplished through regular patrol operations and the efforts of the Narcotics Branch. To fight illegal drug traffic in the District, the department also has established working relationships with federal agencies and our neighboring jurisdictions.

Stop the Pusher (STP) Task Force

A special task force of 40 officers was created to focus on street-level drug activity. The STP task force was responsible for 2,027 arrests. This Casual Clothes Unit responds to areas throughout the city which are known as drug dealing sites. The areas are targeted through criminal intelligence and information received from the community.

A noteworthy accomplishment for this unit was the "Billie Jean Operation." It was known by undercover officers that heroin was being sold throughout the city under the brand name "Billie Jean." By compiling information from current and past undercover purchase reports, surveillance and interviews, the main participants became known. As a result, thirty arrests were made and thirteen indictments on conspiracy charges were obtained. In addition, over $10,000 worth of heroin and $4,000 in cash was seized. It is estimated that this organization distributed over $14,400 worth of heroin per day. Because of his efforts in investigating this operation, Officer Joseph Romano was honored by the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments as "Tactical Officer of the Year."

MPD/DEA Task Force

The department cooperates with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration on a special task force which is primarily responsible for gathering intelligence on major drug suppliers. It has been responsible for 197 arrests and the seizure of over eight million dollars worth of heroin, two million dollars worth of cocaine, and twelve million dollars worth of PCP. A major accomplishment of this group was the successful conclusion of an investigation into an organization responsible for PCP distribution in the District of Columbia. This organization stretched from the District of Columbia to Maryland, Connecticut, and California. The case resulted in 23 arrests and convictions that closed down the largest known PCP distribution organization in the Washington, D.C. area.

The Diversion Investigation Unit

This unit was established for the investigation of legal prescription drugs being diverted for sale on the streets. The Diversion Investigation Unit (DIU) was responsible for the arrest of three doctors, six nurses, and fifty-five other individuals on a variety of drug-related charges. As a result of these 64 arrests, the DIU recovered or seized one automobile, six guns, 8,500 fake prescriptions, and $107,000 in assorted drugs. Investigations conducted by the DIU closed down one PCP lab capable of producing $2.4 million worth of PCP, three organizations distributing $900,000 of PCP annually, and three interstate fake prescription rings doing an annual business of $800,000.

A major achievement of the Diversion Investigation Unit in conjunction with the efforts of a Presidential Task Force has been the breakthrough in a two-year investigation into the primary source of Preludin on the streets of Washington, D.C. In late September 1985, the DIU arrested the major go-between in an organization that was estimated to be distributing 52,000 pills per year at a street value of $520,000. As a result of this arrest, it is anticipated that 6 pharmacists, 4 doctors and 15 street runners, all in Philadelphia, will be indicted in this case.

Crime Reduction — an 18-year low

The most significant achievement of the Metropolitan Police Department during Fiscal Year 1985 has been the sustained reduction in serious crimes within the District of Columbia. Not only has the District experienced a 10% reduction in serious crimes over the past year and a 22% reduction over the past three years, it has achieved a record 18-year low in the total number of serious crimes committed in the District. Only 49,959 serious offenses were reported for Fiscal Year 1985 as compared to 55,381 reported for Fiscal Year 1984. This represents the lowest total number of serious offenses since Fiscal Year 1967 when 48,170 offenses were reported.

The District of Columbia also rates very favorably with cities of comparable size for the greatest reduction in crime over the past year. Based upon statistics for the first six months of 1985, compiled by the U.S. Department of Justice, the District ranks second only to Honolulu in the rate of reduction of crime as compared to 1984. Of the seventeen cities with populations from 500,000 to 1,000,000, only six experienced a reduction in crime from 1984 to 1985 while the remaining eleven showed an increase.

Responsibility for this dramatic reduction in crime must, of course, be shared with other law enforcement agencies within the District. But perhaps the most credit for this accomplishment is due to superb assistance and support given to the police by the citizens of the District.

Police-Citizen Cooperation

No modern police department can operate effectively without the support of the citizens of the community it serves.

To be successful in preventing and reducing crime, the department has recognized the need to develop an integrated approach to crime reduction which involves total support from many community organizations, other government agencies and individual citizens.

During the past fiscal year, the department implemented the following programs aimed at uniting all factions of the community in a cooperative effort to fight crime:

Operation Fingerprint—Offers parents an opportunity to have their children fingerprinted as an aid to law enforcement agencies in locating and identifying missing and/or abducted children. For the fiscal year, 15,508 youngsters participated in the program.

Neighborhood Watch—Provides citizens with an opportunity to participate in the protection of their own home and community. The department conducts the Operation Identification program, engraving valuables for citizens, and conducts a home security inspection to inform residents of any items requiring adjustment. Since the program's inception, 71,449 households have participated.

IN FACT (Information Network for Attacking Crime Together)—This program creates an information network within the entire city through the utilization of 1,285 two-way radios in the vehicles assigned to 18 different city agencies. More than 1,109 calls have now been received.

Youth Awareness Program—Addresses life-choice issues of adolescence, motivates youth in

Washingtonian of the Year

Chief Maurice T. Turner, Jr. was one of 17 people honored as Washingtonian of the Year for 1985. The selection was made by the Washingtonian Magazine and the Downtown Jaycees. Each year these organizations honor people who have done the most to make the Washington area a better place to work and live.

Chief Turner accepted the award on behalf of all employees of the department.

positive directions, and demonstrates an effective police/school/community resource model.

Crime Solvers—Interested citizens offer rewards to informants for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a criminal. Contributions to the program are tax deductible.

Through the cooperation of the various media, a "Crime of the Week" is highlighted. This involves a detailing of the facts in the case. Persons with knowledge of the crime are urged to contact the police on a special Crime Solvers hot line. It is stressed that callers need not identify themselves and that information leading to an arrest and indictment in the case can lead to a $1,000 reward.

"Gotcha" Reward Program—A cash reward of $1,000 is given to any citizen who provides information leading to the arrest of one of the ten most wanted offenders identified each month on a poster issued by the department.

National Events

The 50th Inaugural

The Inaugural Parade for President Ronald W. Reagan, beginning his second term as President of the United States, was cancelled one day before it was to take place due to the severe cold weather the Nation's Capital was experiencing. There was a wind chill factor of 20 degrees below zero.

Although the parade was cancelled, there was much work to be done by members of the department in providing support and security for the many other inaugural activities scheduled for January 21, 1985.

A special detail of 565 police officers was called into service to provide security for the various inaugural events.

The Chief's Command Information Center was in full operation. The Center provided staff support for the Chief by monitoring and coordinating essential police activities.

The Public Information Office was operational. They responded to inquiries as to what activities were being held and arranged for press coverage in connection with over 1,200 box lunches that were given to the homeless after cancellation of the Parade.

The President and Mrs. Reagan went by motorcade to the U.S. Capitol where he was sworn in at 12:00 noon as the 50th President of the United States. Later in the evening the President and Mrs. Reagan attended each of the eight Inaugural Balls. This activity alone kept the Special Operations Division busy escorting the President's motorcade around town.

South African Embassy Demonstrations & Arrests

Demonstrations at the South African Embassy were among the activities of national interest during Fiscal Year 1985.

A number of prominent government officials, clergy and citizens not only demonstrated, but 2,770 individuals subjected themselves to arrest in symbolic opposition to the apartheid policies of the South African government.

The District of Columbia Government sponsored a demonstration on April 4, 1985, attended by prominent officials, government employees and citizens.

The department received continued expressions of appreciation for the professional and moderate manner in which order was maintained and the rights of demonstrators were protected.

Emergency Response Preparation

During Fiscal Year 1985, the Emergency Response Team improved its capacity to deal with hostage or barricade situations.

An armored personnel carrier was acquired which can be used to evacuate officers or citizens from a dangerous area.

The Emergency Response Team has worked closely with federal and neighboring law enforcement agencies as well as other District Government agencies in developing a coordinated response to any emergency situation within the District of Columbia.

Detection of Criminals

Major Homicide Solved

On October 1, 1984, Catherine Fuller, 48, mother of six, was returning from a grocery store when she was attacked, taken into a garage and brutally robbed and slain by a gang of youths in the area of 8th and "H" Streets, Northeast. The case sparked widespread interest because of the large number of suspects and the spontaneous nature of the killing. Through the investigative effort of the Homicide Branch and the assistance of the First and Fifth District Detectives, the D.C. Superior Court Grand Jury indicted 17 youth who were all identified as members of the "8-N-H Crew."

The case resulted in the largest number of indictments for a single slaying ever in the District of Columbia. Two of the defendants pled guilty to the slaying prior to the trial. Ten members of the "8-N-H Crew" went to trial which lasted for over one month. The jury returned guilty verdicts on eight of the ten gang members, finding them guilty of first degree murder, kidnapping and armed robbery.

While investigating the homicide, detectives were able to close numerous other robberies and assaults in the same northeast section of the city which were attributed to the "8-N-H Crew."

Repeat Offender Project

To aid the patrol operation, the Repeat Offender Project was established to identify, arrest, and successfully prosecute targeted criminal recidivists currently active and operating in the District of Columbia. During Fiscal Year 1985, ROP arrested 783 offenders, a 41% increase over Fiscal Year 1984. In addition, ROP closed seventeen fencing operations and recovered more than 1.7 million dollars in stolen property.

A major accomplishment was the investigation of an area-wide burglary and fencing ring operating out of a commercial business in the District. This operation did not buy individual appliances, but would only deal with truckloads of appliances and construction material. After a three-month investigation, which also included infiltrating the burglary ring by employment at the commercial establishment, twenty search warrants were obtained which resulted in eight arrests and the recovery of over a million dollars in stolen property.

During Fiscal Year 1985, ROP executed an increasing number of search warrants in an attempt to recover stolen property, firearms, and other contraband. ROP personnel were met with varying degrees of resistance while attempting to gain entry into premises specified to be searched.

None, however, posed such a dilemma as that of one offender. This offender was targeted by ROP following a Crime Solvers tip indicating that he was in the possession of a large number of stolen items that he acquired in exchange for narcotics. In addition, he was alleged to be in possession of several handguns which he rented to hold-up men.

ROP members began surveillance of the offender's home and observed an elaborate security system combining closed circuit cameras, intercoms, steel doors, and barred windows. ROP obtained a search warrant and, after several attempts to gain entry by peaceful means, a police tow truck was used to hook a chain to the mail slot in the steel door. Within minutes, the door was pulled from its hinges.

ROP seized eighty-six pounds of marijuana, a quantity of uncut heroin, $12,000 in cash, and $50,000 worth of stolen property. The targeted offender and six others present at the time the search warrant was executed were placed under arrest and charged accordingly.

Traffic Enforcement Plan Produces Results

During Fiscal Year 1985, the department initiated a comprehensive Traffic Enforcement Plan which was designed to reduce traffic fatalities through expanded enforcement measures and public education, and to increase the level of compliance with traffic laws and regulations by vehicle operators.

A new Speed/Selected Enforcement Unit was established within the Traffic Enforcement Branch, and more intensive traffic enforcement was initiated within the seven police districts.

Based upon the combined efforts of the personnel assigned to the Traffic Enforcement Branch and the police districts, the results of this plan far exceeded all initial program projections.

In addition to realizing a reduction of six traffic fatalities from the Fiscal Year 1984 total of 69, there was an extraordinary increase of 259,493, or 41%, in the number of parking, moving, pedestrian, and warning Notices of Infractions issued during the Fiscal Year 1985 enforcement period.

Alcohol Program . . .

While there was a greater concentration on selected traffic problems, there was no lessening in the department's drunk driving enforcement efforts.

The number of overtime enforcement evenings was increased from three to four. Three sobriety checkpoint operations were conducted during major holiday periods.

Probably because of increased public awareness and compliance, the DUI arrest rate during Fiscal Year 1985 remained largely unchanged from the previous year.

First Female Commander

In January 1985, Joyce F. Leland, a 19-year veteran of the Metropolitan Police Department, was promoted to the rank of Deputy Chief and assigned as commander of the Seventh District. In so becoming, she achieved the highest rank ever as a woman in the 123-year history of the department. She also became the first female to command a police patrol district and one of only three women in the entire country to achieve such a high rank in a major metropolitan police department.

Operations Improved

The Metropolitan Police Department's Management Improvement Plan (MIP) is a logical and organized sequence of management and operational improvements designed to upgrade the quality of police services within the District of Columbia. It was developed under the guidance of Mayor Barry by the Chief of Police and his executive staff.

Significant Management Improvement activities for Fiscal Year 1985 included:

- Development and implementation of a Directed Patrol Program to be tested in the Fifth District.

- Department-wide implementation of a new Performance Evaluation System for sworn personnel.

- Establishment of a Computer Assisted Dispatching (CAD) Coordinating Committee to oversee the development and implementation of the department's new CAD system.

- Automation of the centralized Crime Analysis function.

Awards For Valor

The Annual Police and Fire Awards luncheon was held October 17, 1985 at the Sheraton-Washington Hotel where police officers and firefighters were honored for performing outstanding service in the line of duty. The luncheon, hosted by the Greater Washington Board of Trade, is the Board of Trade's way of paying tribute to the men and women who risk their lives protecting the community.

Gold Medal — The Gold Medal for Valor is the highest award for meritorious service. This medal is annually awarded to one person in the Police and Fire Departments. This award recognizes acts of personal bravery and self-sacrifice above and beyond the call of duty involving the risk to life or great bodily harm.

The Gold Medal was awarded to Sergeant Joseph M. Cournoyer posthumously.

Silver Medal — The Silver Medal is annually awarded to one or more individuals who have distinguished themselves by extraordinary or unusual heroism in connection with the performance of an act involved with the profession.
